Court takes money online

Friday, October 20, 2006

Citizens can no longer claim they failed to pay fines and court costs on time because they could not get to the courthouse.

Jackson County District Court now accepts credit card payments online for fines and costs, court administrator Michael Dillon announced this week.

Go to the 12th District Court Web page at d12.com and select the "pay fines/costs" link.

The courts have been on the Internet for several years, offering records, daily dockets and online reporting for those on probation.
